

Separating, Divorcing, Parents who live apart?

Mediation helps parents make living apart work for their children

When a relationship breaks down it can be hard to think straight and make decisions about the future when you are worrying about the present or mourning the end of a relationship.

We believe an experienced mediator should be the key practitioner, helping clients obtain information and advice regarding children and financial matters before considering all the options and making decisions about the future.

Mediation and support for families since 1989
